For and against essay

A constant problem nowadays is that all the wars going on in Syria and the other surrounding countries and the increased number of attacks from the terrorist organizations force people who live in those areas to leave their homes and move out to other countries. Some people in different countries who face the problem of immigrants believe that it is better to give them shelter while others consider them a threat to the national security.

After all it is good to accept these people in our country due to our moral obligation and in this way we can show the world that we are still humans and that there is hope for better. It is nothing better than a single act of kindness addressed to the people who lost everything from their homes to their own children in a war that is not even theirs.

There is also another approach to the matter because, as some people tend to believe, among the refugees can be disguised terrorists who wish nothing but a way in our countries so they can attack us from the inside and weaken our moral.

Indeed we have to behave like humans and we should accept the immigrants, but not blindly grant them access and shelter in our home. No we ought thoroughly check them and make sure they represent no threat
